Illegal sublets gain speed

NEW YORK. Dozens of New Yorkers are illegally subletting their apartments for a profit, according to the New York Post. Unable to afford their leases alone, savvy Big Apple residents move out and put their rooms up for rent at exorbitant prices, sometimes raking in as much as $6,000 a month from transient visitors. Subletting an apartment in New York requires the landlord's OK, and it is against city law to sublease at more than a 10 percent margin. METRO/EAE

BROOKLYN. Police stopped the driver of a livery car in Bedford-Stuyvesant early Saturday, whom police said was acting "suspiciously." The driver, Eugene Graves, pressed a loaded .38 caliber handgun into Sgt. Michael Miller's stomach, according to police. Miller shoved his finger between the hammer and cylinder of the gun, breaking his finger, but preventing Graves from firing.

Is the Wall St. occupation now out of control?

▶ Fighting, drug use and under-the-tarp lovin' a popular pastime of some of the protesters ▶ But some say debauchery clouds the message

It's gone from movement to mayhem. Sex, drugs and fighting run rampant at Zuccotti Park, Occupy Wall Street protesters say.

"Every once in a while it's fine to smoke a joint," said protester Charlotte Souza, 23. "But I smell it a lot and it really hurts our image."

Intoxicated and aggressive vagrants are clouding the group's peaceful message, Souza said.

"There are a lot of people that are not down with nonviolence," Souza said. "They make it hard to get things done. It's gotten too big, too soon."

During the weekend, there were unconfirmed reports of a man nearly overdosing on a combination of Robitussin and booze; he was rushed away by ambulance.

Mark Bray, 29, a protester from New Jersey, said security and mediation units regularly patrol the park. Security unit members carry walkie-talkies and wear blue armbands to distinguish themselves, and bring in the NYPD when things get out of hand.

But yesterday afternoon, Metro saw a shouting match break out. One man itching for a fight spat in the face of a security unit volunteer, said volunteer medic Calvin Barnwell. "Sundays are usually quiet," said Barnwell, a Queens student. "Today was really stressful."

Passions run high

NEW YORK. There are boxes of condoms available within the park, encouraging safe sex.

"It happens; you're in the heat of the moment," said Jara Buchholz, 22, a protester who came from South Carolina. "Passions are high here."

When people enter Zuccotti Park, they are handed a pamphlet with instructions that read, "Liberty Plaza is a sober zone. Being intoxicated is inappropriate and weakens our mission in many ways."

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers

Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily saleable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

The fifth annual Metro Photo Challenge begins today, once again giving New York City's photographers the chance to showcase their work against thousands of others from around the world.

The Photo Challenge is accepting entries at Metrophotochallenge.com until Nov. 20.

This year there are six themes for entries: Food Porn, Environment, Relationships, Moments of My Life, Imagination and Photo of the Day. As part of the Imagination category, Metro invites traditional photo entries, images that have been digitally manipulated and collages.

There will be eight winners chosen in the categories of Environment, Relationships, Moments of My Life and Imagination. Four winners will be chosen by Metro's panel of judges, and four will be chosen by the number of "likes" each photo receives on Facebook.

More online

For full details on how to enter, visit www.metrophotochallenge.com

The eight local winners from New York City will then go head to head with local winners from every other Metro city around the world.

A panel of judges will then pick a global winner in each of the four categories. The global winners will be announced on Dec. 20, and the winners will each receive a trip worth $1,350 to any city where Metro publishes.

iSeeYou! App helps nab alleged thief

Woman's iPhone snatched But app on the device snapped a pic of accused thief, whom police arrested

A Queens woman was able to help police catch the man who allegedly snatched her iPhone 4 last week with the help of a $5.99 anti-theft app.

Erum Malik, 31, was walking on Liberty Avenue in Ozone Park, Queens, at about 10 p.m. last Monday, Oct. 3. That's when a man bumped into her, she told police, and reached into her front right pocket to grab her black iPhone 4.

He was off and running before she even knew what happened, she told police.

However, Malik's phone was equipped with an app called iGotYa.

When the alleged thief later unsuccessfully tried to unlock and use the phone, the gadget snapped his photo and e-mailed it to Malik.

The mother of four sent texts to the phone, offering a $200 reward if she could get it back.

"I didn't want him to be in trouble," Malik told the Daily News. "I just wanted to get my phone back."

Malik then brought the photo to the police.

"When I told them I had the picture, everyone was surprised," she said.

Police distributed the image to the media last week and put up wanted posters in the neighborhood. On Friday, Oct. 7, police recognized 23-year-old Queens resident Brian Chattoo from one of the posters, according to the NYPD press office.

He was arrested and charged with the theft, but his family says Chattoo looks nothing like the man in the iPhone photo.

Report shows part-timers seek full-time gigs

- National unemployment holds steady at 9.1 percent
- Number of 'involuntary part-time workers' rising

In a bad job market, you have to take work where you can find it. And for an increasing number of Americans, that means working part-time.

According to the new jobs report released at the weekend, unemployment held steady at 9.1 percent — about where it has been since April. But one key indicator went in the wrong direction.

"The number of persons employed part-time for economic reasons (sometimes referred to as involuntary part-time workers) rose to 9.3 million in September," the report said. "These individuals were working part-time because their hours had been cut back or because they were unable to find a full-time job."

www.metro.us
STAY WITH METRO ALL DAY. FOLLOW US ONLINE FOR MORE GREAT CONTENT

Other jobs data suggests the same trend. A Gallup poll released Thursday found that the percentage of workers who are part-time and seeking full-time work rose from 9.3 percent to 9.6 percent in the month of September. That's a modest bump, but it's part of a growing trend: A year ago, just 8.7 percent of Americans described themselves as such in another Gallup poll. More Americans are being forced to work part-time to make ends meet, and they're not happy about it.

"Gallup now finds more part-time workers seeking full-time work, suggesting that some workers are finding jobs but not the full-time positions they seek," reads the Gallup report.

While anyone can call themselves lucky to have a job in this economy, it's not hard to see why the part-timers are dissatisfied — they typically don't get full benefits and have to deal with multiple commutes if they take on multiple part-time jobs to pay the bills. While many of the 9.1 percent of Americans who are unemployed would gladly trade places with them, it doesn't necessarily mean that everything is hunky-dory for those with part-time work.

Obesity rate in US declines

CHICAGO. The percentage of Americans of "normal weight" has slightly increased in the past year, but overweight and obese people still command a solid majority, according to a new study.

In the third quarter of 2011, 36.6 percent of Americans were of normal weight compared with 35.6 percent a year ago, the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index survey found.

Obese and overweight Americans combined for more than 60 percent of the population, it said. REUTERS

Many want more kids but can't afford them

America's idea of the "perfect family" includes having two or more kids, according to Demographic Intelligence, a provider of birth forecasts and U.S. fertility analytics.

But the sluggish economy seems to be keeping Americans from fulfilling that family dream. According to a recent DI report, American families want more children, but their finances won't allow it.

In fact, the report says that about 1.08 American million babies have been postponed or foregone over the past three years, a trend that is especially strong among families who already have at least one child.

The DI report does say that the U.S. continues to have bigger families than the rest of the developed world. But if the economy doesn't cooperate, then the era of the big American family will continue to slide downward.

MAINSTREET.COM

The DI says it has pinned down the exact "ideal family size" – 2.66 children, up from 2.39 in the late 1990s.

Hopefuls sidestep Mormon questions

WASHINGTON. Republican presidential contenders Herman Cain and Michele Bachmann refused yesterday to wade into a controversy over a Texas pastor's comments about rival Mitt Romney's Mormon faith.

"I am not running for theologian in chief," Cain said on CNN's "State of the Union" show when asked about the views of Dallas pastor Robert Jeffress.

Jeffress, who backs Texas Gov. Rick Perry in the 2012 presidential race, said Friday that Mormons were a cult and not Christians.

Bachmann, also a conservative Christian, called the controversy "inconsequential" and said jobs and the economy were the topics of concern to voters.

Protests reach into education

NEW YORK. College students across the country rose from their classroom desks on Oct. 5 and walked out the door. Known as Occupy Colleges, this movement showed students' solidarity with the Occupy Wall Street protesters.

After the walk-outs, students congregated on college greens from coast to coast to stage protests against corporate greed, high tuition and political corruption. Almost 2,500 people have "liked" the Occupy Colleges Facebook page. Now the movement is putting out another call to students for Thursday, Oct. 13.

The page encourages students to join one of many occupations taking place in cities across the nation including Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia and the largest in New York City. Rumors of a "World Wide Occupy" on Oct. 15 have begun circulating as well. METRO/CG

This year's college freshman have a lot of spending power, but they're more cautious with their money. They also have more free time than any other class before them, according to the 11th annual College Explorer survey powered by Crux Research.

"With more than a decade's worth of College Explorer data, we are able to track exactly how college life has changed for students in 2011," said John Geraci, president of Crux.

11.4 Daily hours of discretionary time for students.

This student body has $417 billion in spending power, a 14 percent increase from last year. However, the current class is also more careful with money. When it comes to tuition, there has been a decrease of 14 percent over the past 10 years. (Scholarships, financial aid or loans amounts have increased 15 percent.) The study also found that this student body is more apt to stretch a dollar.

There was one exception. According to the study, food spending actually increased by 39 percent from last year; students spend about half of their discretionary funds on food.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

The feed ...

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or less.

Today, Pink is relaxing with some cable TV, John Stamos is looking on the bright side, Annie Lennox is testing everyone's memory, and Conan O'Brien is hatching conspiracy theories.

▶ @Pink
There is nothing like a good law and order marathon.

▶ @JohnStamos
l.a. traffic didn't totally suck today

▶ @AnnieLennox
Does anybody out there know the teapot song??!! It goes like this... "I'm a little tea pot short and stout..."

▶ @ConanOBrien
Have you ever noticed that you never see me and Ryan Gosling in the same room at the same time?

McCartney: From 'Love Me Do' to saying 'I do'

Paul McCartney tied the knot for the third time, marrying New Yorker Nancy Shevell in London on Sunday, according to the BBC. The couple exchanged vows at Old Marylebone Town Hall, where McCartney married his first wife, Linda, in 1969. Shevell wore an above-the-knee gown designed by McCartney's daughter, Stella, with McCartney's other daughter, Beatrice, serving as the flower girl. McCartney and Shevell then returned to his London home for a small reception. The ceremony and reception were noticeably more low-key than McCartney's marriage to Heather Mills, which ended in a very messy and very public divorce battle. "It's just close family, a few friends — we believe about 30 people — so far more intimate," sources say of the weekend's event. Barbara Walters, Ringo Starr and his wife Barbara Bach were among the few invited.

Kristin Davis adopts baby girl

Kristin Davis has adopted a baby girl, she tells People magazine. The 46-year-old "Sex and the City" star found new daughter Gemma Rose in the U.S. "This is something I have wanted for a very long time," she tells the magazine. "Having this wish come true is even more gratifying than I ever have imagined. I feel so blessed." Davis, who is single, has previously stated the she doesn't know if she'll ever get married.

Talking points

A death in the Weezer family

Mikey Welsh, a former member of Weezer and painter in his own right, was found dead in a Chicago hotel room this weekend, of a suspected drug overdose. Welsh started playing music in Boston bands in the '90s and was the bass player for Weezer when the group first came out of hiatus at the turn of the century, playing on such hits as "Hash Pipe" and "Island in the Sun." He was reportedly in the Windy City to see his old band play. When Welsh spoke to Metro in 2003, he was just transitioning into his career as a painter. He spoke about an artist's duty to "exorcise the demons." "I don't think art is supposed to be pleasant and happy," he said. "It's a free-for-all." Welsh was 40 years old. He leaves behind a wife and two sons.

A Kabbalah reunion

Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore appeared in public together for the first time since divorce rumors started plaguing them, according to People. The couple attended Friday night services at the Kabbalah Centre in L.A. While they sat on opposite sides of the aisle — as is customary at the Centre — they greeted each other with a hug afterward and left with their arms around each other's waists, according to onlookers.

Blake Lively moves on?

It looks like Blake Lively's recent visit with "Green Lantern" co-star Ryan Reynolds in Boston was a bit more than friendly. The "Gossip Girl" star, who recently split from Leonardo DiCaprio, was spending time with Reynolds while he was in the city filming a new movie, according to Hollywood Gossip. "When Ryan took Blake to catch her train back to NYC they were making out and looked really happy together," a source said. Apparently, Lively was at a recent Radiohead concert in New York that Reynolds attended with ex-wife Scarlett Johansson — though sources now say that he left with Lively instead, immediately boarding a train for Boston afterwards.

What could possibly scare Hugh Jackman?

Hint: It has nothing to do with the boxing robots in his latest flick, 'Real Steel' The star of the stage and screen talks singing and sequels

GETTY IMAGES
▶ Hugh Jackman stars in "Real Steel."

There is a pivotal moment in Hugh Jackman's life that will always stick with him: singing in public for the first time. "I've never been that scared again. That was 15 years ago. July 26, 1996," he says. "I was asked to sing the national anthem at a very big rugby match down in Australia — millions of people watching, a hundred thousand people in the stadium and I had a panic attack the night before. I was terrified."

And with good reason, it seems, as the stakes were certainly high. "I had in my head, right or wrong, that if I screwed this up, it's over. I had seen people booed off singing the national anthem badly and never work again. Australia's a small place, right?" he says. "Now, if I had been booed off — if things had not gone well — I know I wouldn't be here today."

FOR THE COMPLETE PROFILE, VISIT WWW.METRO.US/MOVIES

His latest film, "Real Steel" — designed to be a family-friendly, rousing crowd-pleaser — seems well-suited for a franchise, but Jackman shies away from discussions of a sequel. "It's not the right time to be talking about it," he says. "It's kind of like the week before the Super Bowl saying, 'Do you think you'll be in the Super Bowl next year?'" That being said, it doesn't mean the idea isn't already in motion. "I know it's being written, and I know in a way it's planned and that's always been there," he admits. "I have signed on for one if there is one, but none of us involved are thinking beyond [opening weekend], trust me. That's not the mentality you have."

Besides, Jackman — as both an actor and a producer — is far too familiar with how hard it can be to get a movie made, even a "sure thing." "In my experience — particularly with X-Men, I don't know why — there's never been an easy ride," he says. "There are I-can't-tell-you-how-many reasons or potholes that could derail any movie, and it's sort of miraculous it gets made and gets out there. So I never really take it for granted. It's an exciting business to be in — but I'm glad I'm on this side of the camera, because the other side I want to slit my wrists."

So instead of diving into "Real Steel 2," Jackman is heading back to Broadway for a 10-week run of a one-man show before he films Tom Hooper's take on the musical "Les Miserables," followed by the next "Wolverine" film. Having played the character for more than a decade, it's something that comes quite naturally to Jackman. "I play it at home, obviously," he says. "For parental control, it really helps."

Twitter trouble

While he seems to have mastered the intricacies of controlling robot boxers just fine on the big screen, Jackman admits that he himself isn't exactly technologically savvy — even when it comes to something like Twitter.

"I started posting things on Twitter, and my publicist rang me one night and said, 'You just posted your home address on Twitter,'" Jackman remembers. "Because my daughter was swimming in the fountain outside my house, and I didn't realize I'd put my street name in the photo. So she says, 'From now on, you must send me everything you post.' So I do a tweet, and I send it to her and then she forwards it on."

The biggest myths of business success

Most people don't make millions overnight while being controversial and playing the game their way The truth behind some workplace fairy tales

Advice

ALEXANDRA LEVIT
WWW.ALEXANDRALEVIT.COM

For my latest book, "Blind Spots: The 10 Business Myths You Can't Afford to Believe on Your New Path to Success," I went in search of the top myths that you need to debunk today to ensure a successful career in a market where so many are unemployed, underemployed or unhappy at work. Here are a few I uncovered:

▶ The Mark Zuckerbergs of the world are exceptions to the rules. Very rich, very talented exceptions who can ignore dress codes.

GETTY IMAGES

Overnight success is possible. Most people persevere for a long time and experience several setbacks before achieving an objective definition of success. You'll be best served if you are able to move your dream forward a little bit at a time and can cope when things temporarily go south.

Controversy will propel your career. Being controversial usually generates attention for a little while, but people will probably not trust you in the long-term. Instead, work to incorporate the tried-and-true values of honesty and authenticity into your daily work life.

Employers want you to be yourself. While employers value the unique set of skills and experiences you bring to the table, they expect you to toe the line with respect to company rules and conduct. The most effective employees are those who are able to assimilate.

More myths:

Being good at your job trumps everything. You can be the most talented employee your company has ever hired, but if your contributions aren't visible and people don't value what you do, it simply won't matter. So instead of slaving over your job, spend a little more time devising ways to promote the great work you're doing.

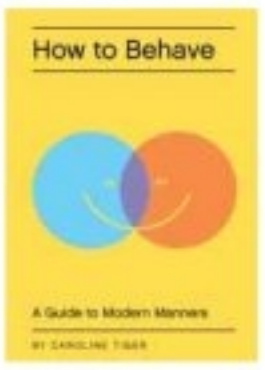
10 Ways to act like an adult with the office photocopier

In her new book, "How to Behave," Caroline Tiger spells out the appropriate way to handle a wide range of everyday scenarios, from carrying an umbrella in the city to saying "I love you." While her playfully proper tone certainly contributes to the book's subtle humor, part of the fun is realizing just how ill-equipped we humans are at navigating the most mundane of tasks with the slightest bit of poise and class. Case in point: her photocopier etiquette rules, which we're excerpting here — and violate almost hourly.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
monica.weymouth@metro.us

Tiger's rules:



1. Never leave the copier without first attending to a flashing icon, which usually indicates a paper jam or misfeed or the need for a new toner cartridge.
2. If you cannot resolve the copier's distress signal by yourself, notify your office manager or machine serviceperson immediately.
3. Never leave the copy machine empty of paper.
4. If you used color paper or letterhead or any type of paper besides white, remove it before leaving the machine so that others don't use it by mistake.
5. If you become frustrated with the copy machine, do not kick it, punch it or become violent toward it in any way.
6. Do not eat or drink around the photocopier.
7. Do not smudge the platen glass with your oily fingertips.
8. No matter how funny it looked in the movie, do not attempt to photocopy your own or another's body parts.
9. Remove staples, sticky notes and paper clips from whatever you're going to copy.
10. Little jobs trump big jobs. If you're making five copies of a 250-page report, you should interrupt the job to let in the person who needs to make a one-page copy.

▶ Going "Office Space" on the copier, although therapeutic, clearly violates rule No. 5.

How to negotiate your salary like an FBI agent

About to face off with a stingy HR department? Take some tips from deal-making pros Author Jim Hopkinson on how to make more money

Whether you're in the process of accepting a new job or attempting to negotiate a raise at your current gig, asking for more money than what's on the table is inherently awkward. Plus, you're likely up against HR employees who have these talks all day, every day.

In his new book, "Salary Tutor," Jim Hopkinson compiles advice from a number of pros — most notably, the FBI. What works for law enforcement interrogators could work for you: paraphrasing and repeating phrases, asking open-ended questions, identifying emotional triggers in the opposing party and initiating pauses in conversation to coerce new information.

Then again, it could also turn into a weird "CSI: Miami" outtake. We checked in with Hopkinson about making it work in the real world.

Why do so many people dread salary negotiations?

Discussing salary is often a taboo subject with friends and colleagues, so people are underprepared because it's a skill that many people are never taught. Whereas an HR professional has the proper training and might negotiate salaries several times per week, you might only negotiate salary a few times in your career.

The FBI techniques sound great on paper, but actually inviting a silent period goes against most people's instincts. Do you have any advice on how to handle that pause?

It can definitely be awkward at first, so the key is to practice. I once spent eight straight hours preparing for this 30-second conversation. That might sound like a lot, but considering that your yearly salary is at stake, and that Americans spend about five hours a day watching TV and 53 billion minutes a month on Facebook, it is time well spent.

What about repeating information makes HR employees bend to your will?

The key, as with any important discussion, is to show that you are actively listening and fully engaged. You show that you understand what is being offered, which ensures both parties that they are on the same page so that the negotiation can continue.

▶ Be strong in your silent treatment! FBI negotiators leave pauses in their interrogations, which the other party tends to fill with small talk and valuable information.

More than $

Before you accept a number, what should you be considering?

The bottom line is that it's not always about the money. Does the job have a good work/life balance? How is the commute? Will you be working with a great boss and co-workers? Most importantly, are you doing something you love? You should always consider these factors when evaluating the overall offer.

DIGITAL VISION

▶ Millenials want secure careers and are more accepting of public-sector jobs.

Today's college students look to serve — securely

Nonprofit and government gigs are high on the career wish lists of the so-called 'millenial' generation How they differ from Baby Boomer and Gen-X predecessors

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, millennial students increasingly value opportunities in government agencies and nonprofits. Its latest survey reports that 61 percent of all internships during the 2010-2011 school year were in those sectors.

Indeed, college faculty members who replied to queries for this article reported that their current students are — more than any other in recent memory — looking for safe-bet careers and trending away from the for-profit sector. "There's certainly a willingness to work for government amongst millennials," says Mike Hais, a former political pollster for the Democratic Party, and co-author of the new book, "Millennial Momentum: How a New Generation is Remaking America." "That's a big shift from proceeding generations. Boomers, to a considerable degree, were not comfortable in government, and Generation X was very anti-institutional. But if you ask millennials what their ideal employer is, hi-tech is at the top, but then it's the State Department, the CIA and Teach For America. There weren't many Baby Boomers in the '60s that wanted to work for the CIA."

Does this point to a pragmatic millennial zeitgeist, or is it simply a natural response to a disastrous economy? The two might go hand in hand. "We've noticed more students coming in before the semester begins worried about their choice of major, career-wise," says Anthony Ciarleglio, director of cooperative education and internships at Western Connecticut University. "They're more accepting of the public sector, because they see a secure job there."

Strategic service

While millennials are especially interested in nonprofit and community service work, they're also aware of their résumés.

"Boomers were very idealistic and ideologically driven — looking for the solution that 'feels right for me.' Generation X was very practical and pragmatic: 'I'm on my own. The only person that will watch out for me is me.' Millennials have a combination," explains Morley Winograd, Hais' co-author on "Millennial Momentum." "They value community service because they want to change the world, but they're not going to do it if it won't help them through the next hurdle of life."

Pros and cons of the protest

Protesters gather to bring down the greedy capitalist but ignore how corrupt politicians manipulate the system. The fact is that employers can't employ people when government spending, borrowing and regulating takes profits from them and increases their labor costs. Senators will cut benefits in order to keep the bureaucracy. And, they will make these cuts as painful as possible to provoke street protests and cause job losses that justify new spending. Pray that our senators have the wisdom to reorganize government and repay the debt. If they fail, the next time we "Remember the poor when we vote," we'll be considering our own impoverished situation. MICHAEL MCCARTHY, VIA E-MAIL

These Wall Street protesters are a waste of time, space and money. They represent exactly what is wrong with America — the entitled masses who feel they are "owed" something. There is a new American dream; it is no longer work hard and get ahead — it's get as much as you can by doing as little as possible. Rule No. 1: Life is not fair. MICHAEL CHIMENTI, OAKLAND GARDENS

I am seeing the panicky right wingers crying "Communists." I see the politicians crying "We're sick of the protestors." We see the police trying their best to make Wall Street seem like Tiananmen Square by bullying the protestors. The one simple equation is that all the politicians, communist shouters and the power tier are really scared. OWS is an idea whose time has come. People are fed up with politicians who have their mouths in the corporate trough. This is America. This is free speech. This is democracy at its best. ROBERT C. YUKNAVECH, CHELSEA

It is no secret anymore that last day's demonstrations "against capitalism" is just a well staged and well paid event. Almost all participants have no clue why they are there. ELENA BRIO, VIA E-MAIL

Remembering a rights icon

Two American icons passed away on Oct. 5. Steve Jobs is being widely celebrated. But deserving of equal attention is the Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, a fearless leader in the civil rights movement. His contribution to the present cultural fabric of this country is vast. Mr. Jobs may have altered the manner in which we communicate, but Rev. Shuttlesworth helped change the way we treat each other. DAVID TERHUNE, BROOKLYN

● Lose third-straight game ● Jets representative in tough game at New England ● Running game gets back in gear, defense can't stop Green-Ellis

JIM ROGASH/GETTY IMAGES

▶ BenJarvus Green-Ellis dives into the end zone in the second half as part of his 136-yard, two touchdown performance.

What the Jets needed was more bell-cow.

During the preseason, head coach Rex Ryan said that despite some flashy additions at wide receiver, this team would still be defined by the ground game and would be led by their "bell-cow" running back Shonn Greene. It has been anything but a strong start to the season for Greene or any of the Jets running backs. Coming into the game, the Jets had the No. 30 rushing offense in the league.

For a top-five rushing team last season, the Jets needed to find their groove and they did in part behind Greene's 83 rushing yards and a touchdown in a 30-21 loss at New England.

"I was encouraged, we did some good things," Ryan said. "I thought we got back to runs and completions. I thought we did some good things offensively there."

It needed to be better, especially against a Patriots team suspect against the run and without injured linebacker Jerod Mayo. Greene's carries were negatively impacted in the fourth quarter, when the Jets were down by two scores and needed to pass.

"We talked about it early in the week, trying to be a little more balanced. I thought Shonn Greene had a heck of a game. He ran the ball hard, really wore that defense out," Tomlinson said. "We have to get better but there are things to be encouraged by. Running the ball better; moving the ball at times."

Jets vs. Dolphins
Monday, Oct. 17, 8:30, ESPN

What went wrong ...

1 Brady precision — With their second possession of the game and on first-and-10, Tom Brady pinpointed a pass to Wes Welker across the middle, hitting his wide receiver perfectly. Brady found Welker's back shoulder, away from Jim Leonhard who had dropped into zone coverage. The 32-yard pass put New England on track for their first points of the game.

2 Case of the drops — Mark Sanchez completed his first pass, a simple dump to running back LaDainian Tomlinson, for five yards but then after that, was victimized by the inability of his targets to get their hands on the ball. On his next three passes, Dustin Keller, John Conner and Santonio Holmes all got their hands on the ball but failed to reel it in.

3 Cousin Vinny — The first drive of the second half featured everything, including a Jets fumble recovery reversed by the referee, Brady put New England up 17-7 with a touchdown pass to Deion Branch. It was Brady 275th career touchdown pass — tied for eighth all-time with former Jet Vinny Testaverde. METRO/KD

What went right for the Jets ...

1 Down, but not out — Despite falling behind 10-0 midway through the second quarter, a Jets offense that had struggled in the opening 15 minutes suddenly came to life. Shonn Greene capped off a systematic drive, featuring nine runs and four passes.

2 Getting to Brady — Much like they did last year in the divisional round, the Jets' defensive line did a fantastic job in applying pressure on Tom Brady. Former Rutgers star Jamaal Westerman keyed the defense, getting just his second career sack in the second quarter in starting for the injured Bryan Thomas, the Jets rattled and limited Brady all afternoon long. He added another sack later in the game.

3 Alcrotraz gets a gift — It had all the marks of a Patriots' scoring drive. In their two-minute offense, Brady had marched the offense down the field 83 yards down to the 11-yard line with nine seconds left in the first half. Inexplicably, the perfect pass went through Aaron Hernandez's hands and into the mitts of Antonio Cromartie, who was beat on the play and behind Hernandez. METRO/KD

The Jets were just 3-for-11 (27 percent) on third down in the game. The Patriots were 7-for-14 (50 percent) and had 12 more first downs than New York in the game.

ALCS Game 2 delayed

It's the October of rain in the American League playoffs. After the Tigers and Yankees dealt with multiple rain delays, the ALCS is now dealing with their own. Game 1 was twice delayed, while Game 2 was postponed entirely. They'll play at 4 p.m. today. METRO

Late interception return seals game for lowly Seahawks ● Cruz plays hero and scapegoat in fourth quarter ● Manning throws for 420 yards, but three interceptions and one fumble

GARY HERSHORN/REUTERS

▶ Brandon Browner (39) picks off a pass juggled by Victor Cruz and returns it 94 yards for the game-sealing touchdown over the Giants.

The Giants suffered an ignominious 36-25 defeat to the lowly Seahawks in a game with its share of twists and turns.

Despite capitalizing on what looked like a turning point early in the fourth quarter, the Giants (3-2) couldn't overcome another fourth-quarter deficit for the comeback win.

Second-year wideout Victor Cruz suffered the fate of being the hero and goat within a span of 10 minutes, as the Giants' three-game winning streak came to a halt.

"We had a lot of things that we did poorly," said cornerback Corey Webster. "We turned over the ball and we left some out there on the field as a defense. We had opportunities to make some plays and we didn't. We put up a fight but at the end, we didn't have enough to pull it out."

"I got hit and it got bobbled up in the air and I knew it was all downhill from there. I knew one of them was going to pick it off."
WR VICTOR CRUZ, ON THE FINAL INTERCEPTION RETURN

All looked destined for Big Blue's third-consecutive fourth-quarter comeback when Cruz hauled in a desperation Eli Manning pass early in the fourth quarter.

The Giants were down 19-14 with just over 12 minutes remaining when Manning hurled a pass to Cruz. Unfortunately for the Giants, Cruz was double-covered, but somehow managed to corral the jump ball by making an athletic one-handed catch and racing the remaining 25 yards for what was the go-ahead touchdown.

That was the highlight of Cruz's day, but the ramifications of his later mistakes are what everyone will remember. The Giants found themselves down 29-25 with two minutes remaining, inside their own 10-yard line, when Cruz bobbled a pass. It was picked off by Brandon Browner and returned 94 yards for the game-sealing touchdown.

"That was the game," Cruz said. "There was about a minute and some change left and we potentially could have won the game … it kind of erases [my big statistical day]."

TONY WILLIAMS

Two negative ...

1 Cruzin': Victor Cruz suffered the fate of being the hero and scapegoat within a span of 10 minutes. Cruz hauled in a desperation pass early in the fourth for what looked like the momentum-changing score. Cruz's day would turn for the worse with less than two minutes remaining when he bobbled a pass that intercepted and returned for a touchdown.

2 No fantasy: Manning threw for a ton of yards (420), but it was the miscues and poor throws that will overshadow his statistics. Despite going 24-of-39 for three touchdowns, Manning had three picks and one lost fumble. Passing yards — and fantasy points — notwithstanding, it wasn't Manning's best performance. METRO/TW

Two positive ...

1 To the Victor: Yes, Cruz will deservedly get his share of blame for the loss, but it can't be overlooked that he is quickly becoming Manning's second-favorite option behind Hakeem Nicks. He finished with eight catches for a career-high 161 yards and a touchdown and was grinning ear-to-ear when the local favorite heard the deafening "Cruuuuuz" chants.

2 U again: Osi Umenyiora is back! The veteran defensive end sacked Seattle quarterbacks 1.5 times, running his season total to 3.5 after just two weeks of action. Umenyiora beat Seattle's first-round left tackle Russell Okung numerous times around the edge and sometimes even off the snap. METRO/TW

Coughlin surprised by lackluster performance

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Coughlin

Coaches often talk about the final practice of the week in comparison to how their team plays in a game.

It is the last chance the coach gets to see his team in action before Sunday's game. Everyone who is going to play Sunday is usually active and the game plan is fully installed.

The problem? That practice can lie.

"We had a lot of enthusiasm, a lot of zip. We practiced well on Friday," Coughlin said. "I thought we finished the week off right, I thought our Saturday night meetings were focused and intense."

Obviously it didn't translate to game day.

"I fully expected to win. Probably the most miserable feeling as we've had around here in a long time," Coughlin said. "To win three straight and then come into our own place at home and not win, and not to be representative of where we are." METRO

▶ Nick Swisher's postseason struggles leave his Yankee future in doubt.

ALCS under way, while Yankees turn focus to next year ◗ Clutch hitting let the team down against Detroit

The Yankees planned on hosting Game 2 of the ALCS against the Rangers last night. Then, they had a flight ready for their departure with an ideal scenario having them two wins away from the World Series.

Instead, they're packing up the clubhouse and going home.

There are multiple reasons why, but the most stark was their lack of clutch hitting in a five-game ALDS loss to the Tigers. The Yankees batted .260 in the series, which is their highest batting average in a postseason series they lost since batting .282 in the seven-game 2004 ALCS to the Red Sox.

Like that number, this year's figure is somewhat deceiving. The Yankees won two games by scoring 19 runs and hitting .324 (24-for-74) while in the three losses they scored nine times and hit .212 (21-for-99).

The poor showing was reflected in the four-five-six hitters in the lineup. Alex Rodriguez (.111), Mark Teixeira (.167) and Nick Swisher (.211) were a combined 9-for-55 and with runners in scoring position the trio went a combined 1-for-13.

"I don't want to single anybody — it's the whole team. That's the game. [I'm] looking forward to next season."
ROBINSON CANO, ON THE OFFENSE

"[Rodriguez] gave the best effort he could," general manager Brian Cashman said. "The guy's a hard worker. He cares. He wants to be successful, and more times than not, he is. He's hurting like the rest of us are here now. He'll come back next year in great shape.

"Our offense, despite [Game 5], is an area of strength. Offensively we should be OK."

LARRY FLEISHER
sports@metro.us

.160

Right fielder Nick Swisher is batting .160 (16-for-100) in his postseason career with the Yankees. He has four home runs, but just five runs batted in.

Free agents

The Yankees have a few notable free agents — and possible free agents — they will have to deal with over the offseason.

RF Nick Swisher
Swisher has always been a fan favorite, but his postseason struggles continued again this year. Can the Yankees afford to re-sign him for sentimental reasons?

SP CC Sabathia
Sabathia isn't a free agent ... yet. As part of his original contract he was allowed to opt out after 2011. It appears likely he will, but probably just to get more money. It's hard to argue he doesn't deserve it.

GM Brian Cashman
Yep, you read that right. The guy making these decisions — he's a free agent too. Cashman has been the Yankees' GM since 1998 and says he wants to stay. We'll see though.

Girardi meets media on Tuesday

Yankees fans are unlikely to get many offseason questions answered, but manager Joe Girardi will meet the media for his end of year press conference tomorrow at noon.

The more interesting conference may come when Yankees general manager Brian Cashman meets with the media, which has yet to be scheduled.

On his plate will be decisions about free agent Nick Swisher and whether he believes pitcher CC Sabathia will opt out of his contract as he is allowed. METRO

Around the NFL

The Eagles' slide continues, while the Raiders got a big win the day after Al Davis died.

1 Vikings 34, Cardinals 10
The Vikings finally got out to an early lead and didn't choke it away in the second half. Adrian Peterson made sure of that with three touchdowns in the first quarter. Peterson finished with 122 yards, while Arizona's Kevin Kolb had three turnovers.

2 Steelers 38, Titans 17
Consider all the questions answered. After hearing all week about how the Steelers' ship was sinking (or sunk), they came out and blew a surging Titans squad out of the stadium. Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger limped his way to a 228-yard and five-touchdown performance, while the defense limited Chris Johnson to just 51 yards on 14 rushes.

3 Buffalo 31, Eagles 24
It was another week, but the same story for the "Players formerly known as the Dream Team." Buffalo running back Fred Jackson ran all over Philadelphia for 196 total yards. Meanwhile, Michael Vick continued his regression, throwing a career-high four interceptions in the loss.

4 Raiders 25, Texans 20
Some things seem destined to happen. Then again, the Raiders are a pretty good football team as well. Playing a day after their owner died, Oakland improved to 3-2 holding on to a late lead over Houston. Sebastian Janikowski kicked four field goals and Darrius Heyward-Bey had 99 yards and a touchdown. Matt Schaub threw a pick in the end zone to seal the game.
